Language Focus: Expressing Amounts

Amount – A quantity or measure of something

There are many words in this story that express either a specific number (E.g. 30), or a general amount (e.g. a few) of something. When we want to show that there is more than one of something, we make the noun plural by adding an –s. However, there are other signal words that can help us determine if an amount that is bigger than one is being expressed.

This lesson will introduce you to some of these vocabulary terms, so you may better be able to identify an expression of quantity.

Practice identifying terms of amount:

Each of these statements taken from the stories will have a blue number next to it. This number indicates to you how many words/phrases in the sentence are related to amounts/quantities. Some of the words in the phrases will be actual numbers, while other will just indicate an amount. See if you can identify the phrases and say how many each phrase is referring to.

Example:

(2) A few thousand people gathered at the Cenotaph in downtown Calgary on Tuesday morning for one of several Remembrance Day ceremonies across the city.

Answer:

(2) A few thousand people gathered at the Cenotaph in downtown Calgary on Tuesday morning for one of several Remembrance Day ceremonies across the city.

A few thousand= about 3000

One of several (several is more than two, but less than many) so, maybe around one of 4 or 5.

Now you try with these examples from the story: Answers are in the appendix.

Story 1	A few thousand people gathered at the Cenotaph in downtown Calgary on Tuesday morning for one of several Remembrance Day ceremonies across the city. The cold, snowy weather gave a grim, desolate setting for the ceremony. Padre Ian Trigg was taking part in his first Remembrance Day with the Calgary Highlanders. He describes the recent killings of two servicemen in Quebec and Ontario as humbling. He said "I think it certainly brings home to us, as Canadians, the price that can be paid, the ultimate price that some are called to pay." Ceremonies were also held at the Military Museums, the Jubilee Auditorium and the airport.	0:09
Story 2	Calgary police are looking for witnesses in a violent sexual assault that left a 30-year-old woman in critical condition. The attack happened Saturday evening near the Bridgeland LRT on Memorial Drive North East. The victim was discovered in some bushes by a passer-by. Staff Sergeant Beverly Voros is with the sex crimes unit. Voros said, "Maybe they saw someone walking away, running away, (someone) who looked suspicious, maybe (someone) standing on the LRT (platform) said something that sounded wrong at the time." We would love to hear from you. Anyone who was in the area between six and 10 last Saturday night and saw some suspicious activity is asked to call police or Crime Stoppers.	1:00
Story 3	A new version of Calgary Transit's website is now up. It will help transit users know exactly when the next bus or train is coming. The website now includes real-time GPS information from equipment on all buses and C-Trains. The website automatically updates with the latest information every 90 seconds. Transit's director, Doug Morgan, says it should do away with a question that often crosses the minds of commuters, "when will my bus arrive?" The new website also provides translation for 70 different languages. Morgan says the re-design of transit's website has been in the works for more than a year and cost about half a million dollars.	1:56
